Epiclesis

During Mass, have you ever noticed when the priest extends his hands over the bread and wine upon the altar and brings them down in a sweeping motion? This liturgical moment is called the epiclesis, (which is Greek for "calling down upon"), and it is a powerful symbol of the priest "calling down" the Holy Spirit upon the gifts so that they might be transformed into Christ's body and blood.

Like the Old Testament prophet Elijah almost three thousand years ago, the priest stands at an altar, one built on twelve (apostolic) stones. God rained down power, wind, and fire from heaven to consume Elijah's sacrifice, and during the epiclesis, the Holy Spirit descends in power to consume and transform our sacrifices of bread, wine, monetary offerings, and prayer that have been brought to the altar.
